Report to Donors

You gave us so much to be grateful for in 2019.

Supporters like you gave in record numbers to help The Seattle Public Library last year, with more gifts than ever in the Foundation's 40-year history. Thank you so very much!

You made our inaugural Discover Your Library Luncheon a great success and secured our spot as the top fundraiser in North America for Library Giving Day.

Thanks to you, The Seattle Public Library Foundation provides a stable base of support the Library can rely on – which will be critical in the months ahead, as we forge a new path navigating an uncertain economic future.

We've stepped up for the Library in challenging moments before, and we will do it again.

Your generosity has positioned us well to face the storm that COVID-19 brings. We will continue to provide a beacon of hope for the Library and its patrons, through public advocacy and private philanthropy.

Inside this report, you'll find some inspiring Library success stories you helped make possible. As always, thank you for being a member of the Library family.

Sincerely,

Grace Nordhoff

Board President, 2018-2019

“They want to do what’s best for their kids despite all the barriers that they or their kids are facing right now.”

- LAUREN MAYER, CENTRAL LIBRARY CHILDREN’S LIBRARIAN

Far apart, close in heart with Read To Me

The Seattle Public Library continues to expand the idea of what it means to be a patron.

With Read To Me, librarians brought another part of Seattle’s population into the fold – the inmates of the King County Correctional Facility, just blocks away from Central Library.

To many kids in the city, these inmates are Mom or Dad.

“We know the importance of that bond between parents and children,” says Deborah Sandler, a children’s librarian at Central Library and co-lead on the program.

With Read To Me, librarians connect parent and child by helping parents film themselves reading a children’s book of their choice and sending that video to their kids, along with a copy of the book to follow along. It’s an effort to help strengthen the family bond and mitigate the trauma of the children missing a caregiver, librarians say.

This ongoing program began last year, after library staff heard feedback about the need for services among inmates in a community listening group. After jail staff help identify participants, parents engage in three sessions with children’s librarians, covering everything from book selection to practice reading aloud to filming.

Parents take the lead, often helping each other rehearse and even drawing pictures and notes in the books that will go to their kids.

“We really want to build it around their personal experience,” says Lauren Mayer, a children’s librarian at Central and co-lead of the program.

The parents film one story for each child age 7 or younger. They also choose a chapter book to send to their older kids. What results through the course of the process is a bonding experience among the inmates and a positive outlet for them to interact with their children.

One caregiver reported that two kids “loved watching mommy on the TV and asked to watch it over and over again.”

Mayer and Sandler say it’s critical to treat inmates as members of the community and include them in the Library’s efforts to extend equitable services to everyone in Seattle.

“They want to do what’s best for their kids despite all the barriers that they or their kids are facing right now,” Mayer says.

Read To Me is made possible by donors’ support for our Community Engagement programs.

Community Engagement

The Foundation supported Community Engagement with $682,542 in investments. Donor support made the following highlights possible in 2019:

- Mobile Services brought library materials to 124 Seattle locations every month, such as daycares, senior centers, and homeless camps
- Patrons checked out 23,540 free museum passes, providing access to cultural institutions by eliminating the cost barrier
- 1,250 people attended Booktoberfest events – such as trivia nights and LitCrawl – at Seattle bars and breweries, uniting diverse crowds in fun literary-themed activities
- More than 4,000 people visited 23 free Authors Series events, connecting readers with renowned authors on topics of history, politics, equity, and more
- 911 people attended fall Seattle Writes classes, and 102 took Spanish Writing Workshop courses; writers of color made up 60% of Seattle Writes faculty

“Reading is a part of life, you need to learn how to read to learn how to do important things in your life.”

- RUMAN, FIFTH-GRADER AT GRAHAM HILL ELEMENTARY SCHOOL

Global Reading Challenge brings a global perspective

In the past year, 11-year-old Ruman experienced the magic of reading about girls much like herself.

There's Mia, the lead character of "Front Desk," who helps her Chinese immigrant parents at the reception desk of the hotel they manage – much like Ruman, whose parents immigrated from East Africa and who sometimes helps her family's South Seattle business.

There's also Kiki of "Kiki and Jacques," who wears a hijab like Ruman does, and comes from Somalia, like Ruman's mom. It was the first time she saw a girl wearing a hijab on the cover of a book.

These books were selections from the 2019-20 Global Reading Challenge, an annual program for fourth- and fifth-graders that calls for teams of competitors to read 10 books and engage in a citywide trivia tournament. Ruman, a fifth-grader at Graham Hill Elementary, joined the contest with her team of seven called "The Bookmasters."

JK Burwell, Ruman's school librarian at Graham Hill, serves on the Library's committee that selects the books each year. And that magic Ruman enjoyed is very much intentional, she says.

The selection of books each year is intended to represent a variety of reading levels, characters, and authors, in an effort to make them accessible to as many children as possible and expose them to an array of perspectives.

And then there's the teambuilding involved as students work together to study the books and quiz each other on their content.

"It isn't about strong reading," Burwell says. "It's how you work as a team, trusting your teammates, defending your answer."

Donors supported the purchase of 8,000 Global Reading Challenge books distributed to every public elementary school in Seattle, which not only gives Challenge participants access to books, but builds the collections of school libraries, many of which have limited resources for new books.

The Bookmasters won both the Graham Hill contest and a city semifinal in the Global Reading Challenge's 25th year. The COVID-19 pandemic put an early stop to the tournament, but The Bookmasters were crowned co-champions with seven other teams who advanced far into the contest.

And it's turned a girl who didn't much like reading into a bookworm who hopes to become a senator when she grows up.

"Reading is a part of life," Ruman says. "You need to learn how to read to learn how to do important things in your life."

Ruman's team, The Bookmasters, won their school-level round of the trivia tournament at Graham Hill Elementary. (Photos by Lynsi Burton)

Youth and Family Learning

The Foundation supported Youth and Family programs with $782,465 in investments. Donor support made the following highlights possible in 2019:

- Homework Help saw 11,279 visits during the 2018-19 school year, with 60% of students using the program 2-3 times per week
- 73 students took free SAT/ACT prep classes
- 1,746 children and their caregivers bonded through reading in Raising A Reader
- 8,870 children and caregivers learned about Library resources and engaged in play time at Kaleidoscope Play and Learn programs
- 10,112 visitors attended 522 World Language Story Time sessions in Mandarin, Spanish, and Somali, expanding the Library's Story Time audience
- 708 teens received a Fresh Start waiver, restoring their Library access after their accounts were suspended due to lost item fees

Ruman and teammates strategize during the first round of the Global Reading Challenge at Graham Hill Elementary.

- BEATRIZ PASCUAL-WALLACE, CHILDREN’S LIBRARIAN AT THE SOUTH PARK BRANCH

South Park Branch blossoms with revamped space

The South Park Branch underwent a makeover last year.

Built in 2006, it was already starting to show its age, given the proliferation of smart phones and laptops since that time. There were only four power outlets for people to connect their devices, limiting patrons’ time to work and play before their batteries ran dry.

Furniture was also often in the way or hard to move for the cultural events the South Park Branch is known for, like Día de los Niños (Children’s Day) and Spanish Story Time.

But with donor support, that all changed. A Reimagined Spaces grant to the South Park Branch allowed the Library to replace much of the furniture, add colorful new murals, and install new outlets all over the building.

“It’s been working out really, really well,” says Lupine Miller, assistant branch manager at South Park. “It has made our work a lot easier in many ways.”

Furniture and shelves are now movable to make way for public programs. The teen space is no longer invaded by people needing to use its electrical outlet. A tree motif on the walls makes the space feel bigger and brighter. The computer area includes enough outlets for everyone.

Now, the Library can better accommodate crowds at its events, making room for everyone to participate and find a comfortable seat.

“It’s definitely much more in tune with the needs of the community right now,” says Beatriz Pascual-Wallace, the children’s librarian known as “Miss Bea.” “The re-imagining has been a positive thing.”

Perhaps most spectacular is the collaboratively painted mural in the study room, created by teen patrons led by local artist Angelina Villalobos. It’s a tree inspired by the Duwamish River, which runs through the South Park neighborhood.

That project has inspired story walks in which elementary students took walking field trips discussing art and community, ending at the South Park Branch with a look at the mural.

“They really worked together to create this beautiful, beautiful, beautiful work of art,” Miller says of the collaborative effort. “It adds so much to the Library.”

South Park Branch

In addition to a $200,000 Reimagined Spaces grant, the South Park Branch benefits from the McNeil Library Enrichment Fund for cultural and educational programming and outreach. In 2019, the Foundation invested $8,698 of this fund to achieve:

- 200 books given to children at outreach sites and Library programs
- a bilingual preschool art early learning series
- a winter pop-up museum from The Burke Museum, bringing historical exhibits to the geographically isolated neighborhood
- 2 Día de Muertos (Day of the Dead) events, celebrating the neighborhood’s Mexican culture
- 2 Spanish writing workshops
- the annual Día de los Niños celebration in April, with music, art, and a book giveaway
- educational toys, games, and supplies for STEM and arts activities and for the children’s area

Neighbors enjoy the space and its updated color scheme.

2019 Board of Directors

Advocacy

You know The Seattle Public Library Foundation secures private philanthropy to support the Library's collections and dozens of free programs.

But we also strive to acquire as much public funding as possible to keep the Library strong.

While the Foundation has raised more than $165 million in private gifts for the Library in its 40 years of existence, its advocacy work has helped secure $568 million in public dollars during the past 20 years alone.

In 2019, we worked with Friends of The Seattle Public Library and dedicated volunteers to educate the public on a $219.1 million, seven-year Library levy renewal to support extended branch hours, added depth to Library collections, technology improvements, and the remodel of three Carnegie-era branches in need of seismic retrofitting.

This measure passed with 76% support. To those who volunteered and voted, we thank you!

Your support helps us leverage our resources to maximize the public-private partnership that makes The Seattle Public Library work.

Legacy Society

We appreciate the thoughtful, forward-thinking donors who have partnered with us in planning estate gifts to the Foundation. This generous legacy helps secure the long-term vitality of the Library.
